

Indiana's Phone Privacy Act is a marvel, and I would hate to see it weakened. If I have a "business relationship" with a firm, it does not mean I want their unsolicited marketing messages. "Business relationship" implies just that -- they have my permission to call me when we have business that needs to be attended to, and can't be accomplished by a letter. Trying to sell me their other products DOES NOT fall in that category! Please do not allow the CBA to weaken Indiana's law. Thank you, Marian Ely Ward
